"Cunningham combines low-tuned oddball guitars with an always-on swirly dual vibrato in the background to amazing effect. It's a sound in which she not only feels comfortable but thrives in a way few singer/songwriters can. Her riffs and parts are surprising in a way that forces you to listen deeper each time around."

"a perpetual-motion weave of deftly picked guitar lines in a brisk 7/4 meter, stacking up and realigning, jabbing and easing off, sometimes running backward, as the crafty wrangling goes on."

"The clear leader of her band of crack, Southern California musicians... she was also our audacious guide, steering us toward exploration with the shrewd parts she played on three different guitars over the course of four songs"

"She is such a subtly kickass guitarist, and this record contains one of the most beautiful, tear-jerking ballads I've heard in a really, really long time called "Life According To Raechel."

"this is a really good album... Madison Cunningham is bursting with talent."

"her new album, Revealer, contains some of the most fearless guitar playing and tones you'll hear today."

"She may draw you in with her guitar riffs- intricate, experimental and rhythmically dense. Perhaps it's her voice, rich in country-rock earthiness yet expressive on a technical level. Maybe it's the vividly painted character portraits that anchor her lyrics. What your entry point is, the California native expertly balances weirdness and warmth on her second LP, Revealer."
